

What Is Mesotherapy?

Mesotherapy was created by Dr. Michel Pistor in France in the 1950's, where it is practiced today by over 15,000 physicians. Some uses of Mesotherapy include pain management, hair loss, cellulite removal, wrinkles, acne, sports injuries, and even weight loss.

Mesotherapy involves small quantities of a mixture of medication to an affected area of the body using microinjections. The principle behind its use is that a combination of different medications administered in a affected area will have an effect at that site and not affect the rest of the body. The injections are placed in the mesoderm of the skin (See Figure).

The number of shots and length of the treatment vary with each condition. Treatments may be given once per week, then extending to once every two weeks or once per month. The number of shots range from eight to 300 and the number of sessions is 15 to 20.

The latest development in Mesotherapy utilizes a topical formulation, which replaces the injections. Current physicians are now treating patients with this new formulation. This formulation does not require the use of needles and its even pain free. The cost of the injectable mesotherapy is around $1500 per session and the topical session is $2000 to $2500 per session.
